My Dear Friend

I have this moment finished the second reading of yr letter by Friend Powell. I see no objection whatever to doing as you propose. There is some sacking after the load I sent off before, which it will furnish a good opportunity to throw on. I recognize the justice of some of your criticisms, and shall avail myself of them. It will not be possible to make the next Standard "an occasional discourse". The selections are mostly in type and we have no spare type of any consequence - I suppose you have observed that I am "speering o' questions" at Joshua, the General of the Jesuits. He stands mute. Is not that a baisterous science? - I was pleased that you understood "egotism", the most dangerous sin perhaps that we have to deal with. Our anti slavery word is not the world; but renown there in is sometimes mistaken for world renown. We feel puffed up with our little retinue, and take the lippy one moment a wall and halloo, "Attention the Universe! By Kingdoms, to the right wheel, march!" I have no objection. The world ought to wheel to the right, but then I don't want to enlist under every one who undertakes to mount and give the word of command, nor to be kicked right if I do not see the way to step it. — I have paused to read a part of the Liberator. I like most of it extremely, the "Hints &c", the Dialogue, & L 2 particularly. I can make a first rate Standard of it. Such parts of the two leading articles as I think adapted to clear away the mist hanging over the region of the lakes I will extract. I do not think it worth a while to discuss minute differences when the Summa rerum is at stake I assure you. I have felt as if I should sink at the view, wh. I obtained after arriving here of the state of the cause. And old Dutch militia captain up at Klein derhook, whose company was in confusion, cried "By God I'd give one paper dollar to get my company into two streaks!" I am glad to hear of the Mapadments address the sooner it comes the better.
